

COMING THIS WEEK

Andy May

Yesterday's Florence
May 5, 6

Andy May, who recently left the Andy May and Texas Tabby Crabb Band, will give his first area solo performances, this weekend at Yesterday's. Andy, who left the band (now, with other personnel changes called Medicine Wheel) on the best of terms, plans to devote more time to writing and arranging as well as recording projects. The first of these is an album of old time country music entitled Mixed Up on the Back Porch, which he will record with Wynn Fay and Frank Shaw.

As a solo performer, Andy May will play electric and acoustic guitars as well as mandolin and 6-string banjo, and will continue to play old fiddle tunes, bluegrass standards and funky rock and roll in addition to his ever growing list of fine original tunes. May, who has been performing in and out of bands for the past 15 years, is genuinely excited about getting back to the basics of being a solo performer. It's good to see this enthusiastic and versatile gentleman playing again.

David Sokol

Andy May